

Clint Daniels

I've been a homeowner and resident of Mission Hills for over a decade where I'm an active member of the community. My two children attend Grant Elementary, and I've served as the Treasurer on the Grant School Community Foundation. I work for a large international engineering firm leading data-driven transit planning and ridership forecasts on projects across the United States. I've worked in urban and transportation planning for 20 years in both the public and private sector including the city planning departments in New York and LA. Most recently before returning to the private sector, I led the transportation and land use analytics group at SANDAG for 9 years. My work focuses on delivering actionable, data-driven market research to public officials and private companies related to infrastructure and transportation investments. I hope to bring these skills to the Uptown Planners. I'm also a board member of Circulate San Diego.
